1. Read the text and answer the questions. (one point each)

Jordan Jacobs is a young sculptor. At an early age, Jordan was already very creative. He was drawing and painting in his free time. One day, he noticed how much his parents recycled. He decided to start making sculptures out of the recyclable materials. Soon, he started doing the same at school. The students and teachers loved his sculptures. They put them on display at the front of the school.

A journalist from the local newspaper came to interview Jordan about his sculptures. Then, Jordan appeared in the newspaper and became a local celebrity. Other schools in the town have been inspired by Jordan and have started using recyclable materials to make their own art. Jordan says he's very happy that people are using recyclable materials in new ways and that children in his town can develop and show their creativity.
